

Video Game Culture

- there are so many different conversations to be ~~had~~ had and that's what's great about it, for games
- Every experience is worth trying, have an open mind.
- Recently... (recent news)

- next generation, xbox vs ps5 vs pc - that
- summer games fest from Geoff Keighley, events - price reveal
- unreal engine 5-tech, ps5 - should we
- ~~game~~ technicals impact gameplay and vice versa - late? hardware reveal?

- E3 rewatch

- Games Podcasts

- Games "Journalists"

- Delays & leaks

- upcoming releases (movies)

- Cyberpunk 2077

- Last of Us part II

- Ghost of Tsushima(?)

- Crunch culture, Jason Schreier

- feels like the community has grown and become so much more open, in terms of ^{the} people

- I love that it's becoming more and more popular for people to discuss and enjoy the joy and wonder of video games.

- more and more people

- becoming "normal" or mainstream entertainment

things that been selling a lot of...

- I've ~~not~~ watched many game documentaries
 - love learning about the struggles and processes.
 - rewatched E3 conferences, many times.
- I consume this stuff daily.
- I have so much passion for this stuff.
 - I absolutely love the conversations and discussions.
- So much important, cool, and fun realization can come out of these ~~to~~ discussions.
- I've been diving ^{deep and all} around and discovering a lot of independent youtubers who report on video game news and discuss video game cultures.